Field of the Invention This invention relates to an exercise machine and more particularly to an exercise machine which comprises a rear wheel support member mounted on a main frame for movement in a generally rearward direction to receive and support the rear ends of a pair of pedals, and a pair of front wheel support members on the main frame and also mounted for movement in the generally forward direction to receive and support the front ends of the pedals. The main frame is mounted for oscillatory movement in an oscillatory movement plane, and a pair of horizontal track members are mounted to the main frame and for oscillatory movement of the main frame about a generally horizontal axis, one of the track members being mounted on the main frame for oscillatory movement in a lower or downward path of movement relative to the main frame and the other of the track members being mounted on the main frame for oscillatory movement in an upper or upward path of movement relative to the main frame. A pair of pedal arm assemblies are mounted on the rear wheel support member and a pair of pedal leg assemblies are mounted on the front wheel support member each pedal arm assembly being pivotally connected to its respective leg assembly and both leg assemblies being pivotally connected at their rearward ends to the rear wheel support member. A pair of cams are mounted on the main frame and each cam has a first surface opposing the other surface of the cam in contact with the corresponding track member, the cams also being rotatable about a transverse axis. 2. Description of the Related Art U.S. Pat. No. 3,913,286 discloses an exercise machine having a pair of foot supports for a cyclist each foot support being mounted on a link arm, each link arm being pivotally connected at its forward end to the main frame and at its rear end to the rear wheel support member. The rear wheel support member is mounted on the main frame for oscillatory movement about a generally horizontal axis parallel to the plane of oscillatory movement of the main frame and the lower track member is mounted on the main frame for oscillatory movement in the lower path of movement relative to the main frame. A pedal pedal arm assembly is
