two weeks ago we announced a new way to live migrate vmware virtual machines that provides one of the highest throughput and lowest latency vm-to-vm live migrations available. the new technology, known as cloud motion, leverages the continuous replication engine in vcenter server to replicate vms into the new datacenter at unprecedented scale and with only a single step. cloud motion is available in two modes, a passive plan and an active plan. the passive plan replicates vms for 30 minutes once they are powered up in a new datacenter. in a passively replicating environment, if the vms are down, the system will not move them but will power them back up without any interaction from you. in an active plan, cloud motion works in much the same way as vmotion, and will initiate a live migration when a virtual machine is down. however, you can control where the vms move to, so you can choose to have them continue to a new environment or start in your primary datacenter. cloud motion also offers the ability to replicate vms to many external datacenters or cloud platforms without requiring an ec2 instance. the new capabilities of cloud motion and the spring board, together, allow vmware cloud on aws to deliver continuous migration for the first time. all springboards running on vmotion can now be live migrated, which means that the only downtime that customers will see is on that vmotion session, not the entire project. the new vmotion strategy provides a virtually seamless seamless live migration experience when compared to the previous vmotion strategy which has never provided a seamless live migration.

now, you must save your changes and then exit the text file. once you do that, you can login using the credentials. you will need to make sure that you are logged into the root admin account. here is a picture of the process. i hope you enjoy this video! i'll be back with more the following day, and i will have a new video to present as well! enjoy the rest of the videos, and remember to come to my blog site often for more content! the latest version of hcx is now a beta that is available for public download in the vmware software inventory. while this has been known for several months now, the ability to roll out the new version at this point in time is a testament to vmware's commitment to the customer. i do have one question and that is that they should make a policy that once a product version becomes a public beta, they will be constantly publishing news regarding the imminent availability of that new version. it's a bit tiresome to wait and watch. in that vein, it may be more beneficial for vmware to hold back a new release while a bug-fix version is reviewed. yes. vmware cloud on aws govcloud (us) sddc is directly connected to your vpc using elastic network interface (eni) and therefore has access to aws services. virtual machine workloads can access public api endpoints for aws services such as aws lambda, amazon simple queue service (sqs), amazon s3 and elastic load balancing, as well as private resources in the customer's amazon vpc such as amazon ec2, and data and analytics services such as amazon rds, amazon dynamodb, amazon kinesis and amazon redshift. customers can now enjoy the newest generation of vpc endpoints designed to access aws services while keeping all the traffic within the aws network. 5ec8ef588b
