the piece is a wonderful contrast to the first danzon, the danzon no. 1, which is quite angular. mrquez's version is lyrical, a contrast that is achieved with different sections of the orchestra. in this arrangement, the danzon is played by a string quartet, a group of woodwinds, a string sextet, and a soloist on piano. in the original piece, the woodwinds were doubled with the string sextet and the piano. i wrote this arrangement because it is such a wonderful contrast to the previous danzon. the piece begins with a dance-like movement that has an almost funky feel. in contrast to the angular, percussive sound of the danzon no. 1, the danzon no. 2 is characterized by lush, more melodic sounds. if you played the two pieces back to back, they would make a wonderful contrast. the main theme of the danzon no. 2 is played by the soloist. the piece has a dark, mysterious vibe to it, and each variation reflects the mood of the original theme in some way. the piece is accompanied by a string quartet and a pianist, and there are some sections where the brass is doubled with the string quartet. our version will be dedicated to the international danzón dance contest, which takes place in december at the palace of sports and culture in the calle 20 de septiembre in mexico city. we will also be presenting our version at the festival lo nuestro de danzon (which means "our danzon") in mexico city in the second week of january 2019. the festival will take place in the palace of culture and art and in the palace of sports and culture.
