Downloader Trojan - Dloadr-AKL A: I do not know if this is helpful but I just had this exact same problem on my work computer. I searched my computer for "C:\28348177711.exe" and it took me to the exact file that DLADL.AQ had downloaded. The file was then opened with notepad and it contained the following text "Trojan.FakeUpd.FakeUpdate.a" and then at the end it said "The program will be removed from your system as soon as possible" and it listed two options to close it: (1) ctrl+alt+del or (2) run/open with regedit. The first option is what I used. This invention relates to novel materials for removing toxic materials from the environment. In particular, this invention relates to a method of removing toxic materials from waste materials by a chemical oxidation process utilizing compounds containing specific carbon-centered radicals. The removal of toxic materials from waste is a serious problem in the environment. Toxic materials such as mercury, cadmium, lead, etc., as well as certain volatile organic solvents and aromatic hydrocarbons are highly soluble in water. This characteristic is especially problematic when a hazardous toxic material is mixed with waste materials such as coal tar and aqueous coal tar. In recent years, public awareness of environmental degradation caused by the presence of toxic materials in the environment has increased. Therefore, stringent environmental standards for the safe disposal of waste materials have been implemented. In order to comply with such standards, the waste materials must be chemically treated so that the toxic materials are effectively removed. However, conventional treatment of waste materials with oxidizing agents is known to produce a by-product material, often referred to as a salt, which must also be disposed of in accordance with the environmental standards. For example, when coal tar is oxidized with an oxidizing agent, a salt material, referred to as an aqueous coal tar, is produced. Such salts are undesirable for disposal because they cannot be easily disposed of by ordinary means. Therefore, there is a need for a method of removing toxic materials from waste materials which does not produce a by-product material. Prior art methods have been used to remove toxic materials from waste materials such as coal tar. U.S. Pat. No. 4,226,533 teaches a method for oxidizing coal tar with hydrogen peroxide. The hydrogen peroxide is generated in situ by
