Helsinki, Finland — A recent study by the United Nations' United Nations Development Program (UNDP) highlights the "alarming" level of food insecurity in parts of the North African country of Mali. The study, published in The Lancet as part of a series entitled "Unhealthy Hunger", finds that half of all Malians did not get enough to eat in the last month. Compared to the rest of the developing world, the food insecurity rate is particularly high in Mali, one of the world's poorest countries. According to the UNDP study, every second Malian is at high risk of being malnourished and the situation is even worse in rural areas. Nearly one in five Malians are starving, the study estimates. A fall in agriculture, a weak cotton industry, and export prices have led to a sharp decline in the purchasing power of farmers. Read the report online: Read about what is being done to 570a42141b
