Haruko Ichijo is a just-turned high-school student. She has been bitten by the manga fan bug, although by the time she is bitten, she's been reading for a few years and can handle being recognized by fans. The heroines she watches are often considered the epitome of coolness, making her want to be one. Determined to be a magical girl one day, she resolves to follow her dream to become a magical girl. Unfortunately, because she can't summon monsters, she must use her wits and her skill with the cell phone to try and defeat evil. A Bitter Discontent is a story about original characters, so there will be no imitations or prequels to any anime or manga franchises. Youtube Download Donation Links: Become a Patron! She has been bitten by the manga bug, reading alone since the second grade. Throughout her high school years, she has been listening to storybooks and listening to her favorite heroines (Sailor Moon, K-On!, and Magic Knight Rayearth). By the time she's in middle school, she has read many manga. While she never gave up on her dream of being a magical girl, it has been more of a hobby, in her view. However, as the girl who is always looking for her next fan club, the time is finally here. This magical girl creator protagonist, Haruko Ichijo, is determined to be a magical girl when she is in high school. However, she can't use any magic in that capacity. Instead, she studies the concepts of magical girls, and the heroes and heroines she reads about. By practicing for a year, she hopes to be ready for that day when she is finally awakened by an evil force and starts her eternal quest as a magical girl. As she studies, she also picks up another hobby, playing games, including the mobile game Quiz Quiz. She's a bit of a perfectionist when it comes to playing games, often noting

But with what are the players fighting for? In the years after the Galactic Republic won the Galactic Civil War, the fledgling new government placed much emphasis on agriculture and aquaculture, and later invested heavily in expanding the infrastructure of space. These investments paved the way for the superpowers of the galaxy to further develop into the bureaucratic superpowers we know today. With the size of their militaries, the Super Powers continued to build larger fleets and improve their armies. This resulted in them dominating the races and economies of the galaxy, putting almost everyone else in a constant state of economic distress and political instability. But when the robotic Galactic Empires began to spring up, the situation started to change. Soon, all the traditional human colonies were besieged with robotic forces; even the Galactic Republic was shaken to its foundation by the hostile robotic incursions.The human colonization of space was given a much needed boost when the Epoch was invented, and the first human settlements went into orbit around the various star systems of the galaxy. Thus, the larger and more powerful races of the galaxy were compelled to put on the same degree of effort in developing space travel, space technologies, and military force. As a result, the races were now fiercely battling for control over every part of the galaxy.An innovative 4X (eXplore, eXpand, eXploit, and eXterminate) system has been developed that allows for both a traditional approach and more innovative methods to gain control over the star systems of the galaxy. Players get to decide what approach to take in developing the new settlements and infrastructure. Some races focus on military strength and resort to military invasions, some use diplomatic relations and economic diplomacy, and some go for economic progress while sending their fleet to occupy space colonies first and then slowly bringing them into the federation.This unique game system is enhanced by the idea of Free Will, an ability that gives players the chance to choose how their game will turn out. Will it be a slow process, or can players race to take the galaxy in their own hands? FeaturesEclipse Game Center provides a robust game management system and multiplayer cloud services for all players.Individual challenges allow you to setup autonomous game sessions, allowing players to compete without using a gaming session at the same time or using up time that others would need.Core features include:Customizable speed levels, time periods, and game type levels. A variety of game modes for all play styles. Player statistics, global achievement stats, and scoreboards for every session.

Nutrition This person has minor fruit juice sugar addiction, some people say that sugar help to replenish vitamins and minerals, it also used as a sweetener, some researches suggest that excessive sugar intake may increase risk of cancer, cardiovascular disease and type 2 diabetes. People with diabetic or no diabetic could be drink fruit juice at least one or two times a day, the purpose was not only provide vitamins and minerals but also to add sweetness to food. A survey conducted at Master of Pharmacy school at Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. Fruit juices intake that includes one serving of orange and two servings of pineapple was compared to the children’s fruit and vegetable (for organ and bone development and 2 servings of an orange or 2 and half a serving of pineapple). The children’s fruit and vegetable include 6 servings of fruits and vegetables. At the end of the exercise, students had to complete a questionnaire to determine their preference for the fruit juice and orang and pineapple. Participants who were regularly consuming any one of the four kind of juices had a moderate preference for orange or pineapple juice. Fruit juice consumption was even more moderately preferred among those who consumed both orange and pineapple juice regularly. Most of participants were not aware that orange juice could be less healthier than consuming pineapple, juice because of its higher levels of sugars and fats. The conclusion of the research demonstrated that participants were not too satisfied for the juices. The most commonly used of the juices was orange juice.
