A Tree Swallow holds in its throat a buoyancy-reinforcing structure that encases its feathers. The rate at which a Tree Swallow can soar upward is measured by the speed with which the bird beats its wings. These birds can flap their wings up to 80 times per second. While a Tree Swallow is incapable of flapping its wings, it can nevertheless accelerate its body while simultaneously pushing its wings against the air. The Tree Swallow therefore makes use of this form of propulsion. Where the Tree Swallow finds its food 1. It eats insects 2. It eats fruit and nectar 3. It forms large colonies Male Tree Swallows are known to have a striking resemblance to females. As a result, many people have mistaken this bird for the female, in turn leading them to believe that it is the female's mate and what is more natural than for the two of them to breed in the wild. Another factor that leads to the mistaking of male and female birds is that when the female Tree Swallows are incubating eggs, males may visit them in order to feed on their eggs. The Incubating female Tree Swallow then mates with the male even before the eggs hatch, which induces a Recently, the Supreme Court found, under the Equal Protection Clause, that a government may "disadvantage" minorities through the "neutral" classification of certain employment opportunities as "ministerial." Huber v. United States Civil Serv. Comm'n, 243 F.3d 561, 564 (8th Cir. 2001). Even if Petitioner were not barred from seeking judicial review, however, we find that he has failed to state a claim against the government for several reasons. First, Petitioner, a Mexican citizen, is barred from bringing suit against the United States because it is not a party to the Treaty, the United States is not a required party, and the United States is immune from suit. See Hill v. United States, 944 F.2d 1271, 1274 (10th Cir. 1991) (holding that an appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit was unavailable where a United States diplomat was employed by the Canadian government and was a party to the Treaty, but the United States was not a party to the Treaty). Second, with respect to the nongovernmental organizations, Section 2 of the Treaty provides that if a member government is not fulfilling its obligations or if a member government has abused its discretion in evaluating the application, a member government may request that the ICJ review the matter. Thus, even if this provision were enforceable against the United States, it would not provide a basis for naming the organizations as respondents in a habe
