Trilogia dos Enemigos comERCio OEbook, s  o Paulo Surg.Q: How to print something from an input stream without using System.out.println? I need to create a Java program that can capture information from the Console about a user and store that information in a file. The file has to be in a format that allows me to read the information later. The file should be written to a folder on the desktop of the system. How can I achieve this? Update: I do not know how to apply BufferedReader to it, so I can get an InputStream, then read it without using System.out.println. A: System.out is a PrintStream that is created by the Javadoc for the System class: public class java.lang.System { public System(); public static void main(String[]); public static void out(java.lang.Object); public static void err(java.lang.Object); public static boolean ok(java.lang.Object); public static void println(java.lang.String); public static void printf(java.lang.Object, java.lang.String); public static void println(java.lang.String); public static void println(); public static void println(java.lang.Object); public static void print(java.lang.Object); public static void print(java.lang.Object, java.lang.String); public static void println(java.lang.String); public static void println(java.lang.Object); public static void println(); public static void println(); public static void printf(java.lang.Object); public static void print(java.lang.Object); public static void print(java.lang.Object, java.lang.String); public static void println(); public static void printf(java.lang.Object, java.lang.String); public static void println(java.lang.String); public static void printf(java.lang.Object, java.lang.String); public static void println(java.lang.Object, java.lang. e79caf774b
