In Windows Server 2008 R2, I just cannot seem to differentiate them A: A network share is file sharing across a network. It is often thought of as file sharing across an intranet as well. A drive share is an equivalent for a drive on a LAN. If you think of it like computer "shares" you may get it. A network share would be like a shared folders. The difference is that those are typically more obvious and a shared drive may be nameless. Drive shares have more configuration options (see below). Network shares may have configurable ACLs and access restrictions, which may not be necessary with a drive share with. Uveitis in children and adolescents: a nine-year experience in the Health Care Clinic of the S. João Hospital, Porto, Portugal. This article presents an eight-year review of the characteristics of uveitis in childhood and adolescence as determined by Health Care Clinic patients in a developing country. A total of 31 cases were included. The most frequent underlying diagnosis was juvenile idiopathic arthritis (33.3%), followed by pars planitis (9.7%), sarcoidosis (9.7%), and Vogt-Koyanagi-Harada syndrome (4.8%). Ocular complications included cataract in two patients (6.5%), two iris nevi, one iris coloboma, six eyes with macular edema, one cyclitic membrane, and one choroidal neovascular membrane for creating a multidisciplinary group to achieve better diagnostic and therapeutic results 595f342e71
